

A Noble Life

Ensuring People with Disabilities DREAM IT. LIVE IT.

December 2025

Opening Up Her Quiet Little World

Nearly two years old, Turano lives in her own little world, but her parents & Noble Kids team have a plan—and it's starting to work. But first, here's some context.

Toddlers this age typically say at least 50 words. But not Turano. There have been other worrying signs. Rather than the exuberant hugs other toddlers give, Turano doesn't want to be touched. In fact, she doesn't really engage with others, but this is where her early intervention therapy team has started seeing some success.

Physical Therapist Colin Cabage helped her learn to take her first steps. Occupational Therapist Leslie Young is getting Turano used to different textures so she isn't so sensitive to touch. Speech Therapist Kyra Signorelli sees hope as Turano has started imitating sounds. Developmental Therapist Donita Murphy-Sims continues to coax Turano over with the promise of fun toys.

To Cheyenne—a mom anxious about her daughter's refusal to engage in her world—these first signs are like the sun coming up.

Noble Family of Services

When we opened our new location in Speedway this fall, we began marketing it as Noble Art—a unique offering under the Noble services umbrella & the beginning of a more comprehensive marketing strategy. It set the stage for this month, as we announced the rebranding of our First Steps Early Intervention services. Previously known as Kids Only, Inc., these therapies are now Noble Kids. Next up in the new year will be to move our employment services under the umbrella of Noble Works.

The goal for this is to communicate how we can envision our services as vectors of social connection. Stepping back for a moment, you might think about how you connect with the community through areas like art, kids and work. They are areas of commonality we share and that can draw us together. This is the rationale behind Noble Works, Noble Sports and Noble Art. We envision our services as ways that people with disabilities connect with neighbors, businesses and other sectors of life.

We look forward to sharing more in 2026 on this exciting new chapter in our ongoing commitment to empowering the people we serve to truly Dream it. Live it.

Looking for a Unique Gift?

This holiday season you have some new options for that hard-to-buy-for person on your list. With the opening of Noble Art, we have a gallery & retail space to showcase & sell pieces created by the artists we serve. Above, Phillip is showing off one of his recent pieces, Savannah Sunrise.

If you're interested in looking around--or even commissioning something--contact Art Specialist Breanna Emmett.

We also have an online Swag Shop for people to purchase everything from pullovers to baseball caps featuring the Noble logo. Check it out and get your Noble pride on!

We Want to Know What You Think

We want to give you more Noble news you want & cut back on what you don't need. If you can spare a minute to take our very brief survey, we'd really appreciate it!

Mike and Shawn Make a Great Team

When Mike's mom passed away in 2018, he assumed care of his nephew, Shawn. Now, the two are inseparable and Mike has become "dad," as well as uncle and friend.

Of course, that doesn't mean that Shawn needs 100% of Mike's attention all the time--especially when the Nintendo wii comes out. That's when Shawn keeps hinting for Mike to leave by saying, "bye, dad" over and again.

For his part, Mike started his career with Noble as a Direct Support Professional, but has since transitioned to the role of Facilities Coordinator.
